Delivery Costs

Continuing our policy to discount everything, we also subsidise the cost of delivering our products. We pay for the delivery insurance, the fuel surcharges, "heavy parcel" surcharges and £2.00 of the first 20kg charge.

How it works -We are charged £10.40 for the first 20kg of any consignment (22p per kilo thereafter) + Fuel surcharges + insurance etc.

We charge our customers £7.50 for the first 20kg of any consignment + 20p / kilo thereafter this is for a - 1/2 day service, with an economy 3 day service slightly cheaper

Smaller Parcels are sent (when possible) by Royal Mail, Hermes and UPS again all savings on parcel deliveries will be automatically passed on to our customers

Some Companies offer a free delivery option , however there is no such thing as free delivery ! In most cases the price of the goods in question are artificially high to incorporate or hide the actual cost of delivery .

Iodine

For the 2017 lambing season we are offering "Battles Brand" full strength 10% BP iodine and the standard strong Iodine (which is 6.5-7.5% strength). In some cases the standard strong iodine is sufficient, however if you are unsure use the full strength 10% type.

The 10% iodine can also be diluted if necessary with surgical spirits to obtain a lesser strength (and increase the volume) however make sure the solution is not over diluted that it affects the strength and effectiveness of the product)

Due to "Shipping laws" we can now only supply these items (with the Courier) in max 2.5 litre containers

Extreme winter temperatures together with wind and rain can spell disaster for the sheep farmer. Lamb losses due to these cold and wet conditions pose a real threat to the profitability of any flock. Lammacs are polythene jackets which provide protection against the elements for a newly born lamb and help prevent hypothermia which is the major cause of lamb mortality in temperate regions such as the UK. Hypothermia suppresses the suckling instinct of the lamb and any protection against this can help reduce lamb losses. Lammac jackets are designed to ensure the ewe can smell and identify her own lamb. Mis-mothering is not a problem !! Important factor - lammac jackets are degradable in ultra-violet light. This is an important environmental consideration as most hill lambing flocks are situated in National Parks and areas of outstanding natural beauty. Lambs usually shed their jackets after about three days and the jackets will then dissolve under natural light over a period of about five weeks.

A simple to use resuscitator, for use on newborn animals that have a heartbeat, but are unable to breath and animals suffering respiratory arrest.

An invaluable tool for all livestock farmers and vets.

Rapidly delivers the required volume of air, breathing life into the animal's lungs within seconds.

Many newborn animals die because their airways are blocked by mucus and fluid. The Life Saver Resuscitator, fitted with an aspirator mask, quickly unblocks the airways and allows the animal to breath (aspirator mask supplied with all calf and foal kits).

KRUUSE Colostrum Densimeter
For quick evaluation of IgG content in Bovine Colostrum

A quick way of measuring the quality of the colostrum is by using the KRUUSE Colostrum Densimeter. The densimeter measures the specific gravity of the colostrum.

Colostrum with a low Specific Gravity has low contents of IgG and can be regarded as poor colostrum - whereas colostrum with a higher Specific Gravity usually has high contents of IgG. However, high Specific Gravity can also be due to high levels of other proteins and minerals.

How to use:
Fill the measuring cylinder with colostrum. Allow the colostrum to cool down to room temperature (20°C / 68°F), then let the densimeter float in the colostrum with no contact to the cylinder wall.

How to read:
Scale of colostrum surface indicates Specific Gravity (SG)

Specific Gravity	Zone	Explanation
<1.025	red	Poor quality
1.025-1.045	light green	Intermediate quality
>1.045	dark green	Good quality

Complete Kruuse Colostrum Densimeter set with measuring cylinder and multigrade indicator - Cat. No 210855
Stem densimeter (glass) - Cat. No 210854
Stem measuring cylinder 250 ml (polycarbonate) - Cat. No 210857

Colostrum Densimeter

An excellent and very cost effective way to evaluate the IgG content in Bovine colostrum by measuring the specific gravity of the colostrum. By adding the densimeter float to the cylinder containing colostrum (as pictured) a specific gravity reading (SG) can be achieved.
